- In 1917, Budapest purchased a 30-hectare property on the outskirts of Balatonkenese for building a resort. In 1923, the garden house, the engine room, and in 1924 the first hotel building were handed over according to the plans of Gyula Lavotta, technical councillor, together with 80 rooms and a restaurant building for 300 people. From 1928, two more hotels were being built. After the completion of the works, the new beach and the port were formed. This is how the turnaround story of the Honvéd Resort of Lake Balaton started.
- History has spared the buildings. In October 1944, the retiring Hungarian troops established a hospital.
- From November to December 1944, the German army, led by German Lieutenant General von Both, camped here, after which the empty hotels served as refugees' residences. The war caused minor damage to buildings and more significant damage to the interior.
- In the autumn of 1949, a government-level decision to use the Army handed over the resort, and on June 5, 1950, the first guests were welcomed.
